

Preliminary rerouting proposals for the AC Transit system would provide direct connector service between three rapid transit stations in Berkeley, one in El Cerrito at the Plaza, with Albany lines meanwhile leaving bus service virtually unchanged to public buildings, shopping and industrial districts, recreational facilities and San Francisco.

To take full advantage of the high-speed potential of future Bay Area Rapid Transit operations, a total of 14 lines serving Albany, Berkeley and Kensington would be realigned to coordinate with BART service.

Another six lines already serving BART station sites would not require rerouting.

The network realignment also would provide direct feeder service for area hospitals, including Alta Bates and Herriek, as well as a number of convalescent hospitals and other medical facilities.

Intercity express service between Berkeley, Oakland, as well as north of Berkeley to Albany, El Cerrito and Richmond would be abandoned.

Four transbay lines would have triple functions, providing transbay service, local service, and connector service to BART.

Realignment proposals in Albany are as follows:

The length of the San Pablo Ave. business district would be directly connected with El Cerrito and North Berkeley BART stations. East Bay lines serving Solano and Santa Fe Aves. would be rerouted to North Berkeley station. Existing transbay service operating along Solano Ave. could connect with Berkeley and Ashby BART stations. Other transbay commuter lines would continue in operation due to relatively rapid travel time between Albany and San Francisco.

The G line will start at Peralta and will not be a feeder. It will continue as it is. The Fxx line will continue with local service, will feed to BART stations in Berkeley and Ashby, and will run service to San Francisco. The 51A line will be rerouted to San Pablo and will feed to the El Cerrito Plaza station.

Albany Health Department Ecology Center of Albany

The Albany Health Department is the "Ecology Center" of Albany, according to deputy health officer, Harold Van Coops.

Examples of requests for service are: how to get rid of hornets, how to get rid of mildew in the home, how to get rid of a raccoon eating the goldfish, and what number to call to help with cleaning the birds.

Awareness of ecology is a sign of awakening public responsibility, stated Van Coops. Partly used wastes have been a liability, where they could be an asset.

Ecology-minded individuals and groups are invited to call the health department, 526-6116, to register their activities and needs. If there is interest shown, meetings and speakers will be arranged to discuss aspects of preservation of our environment.

Examples of activities in other areas are: re-cycling, organic gardening, community cleanup, back yard sales, new uses for odds and ends, and composting. The composting group is planning to share the use of a shredder.

Discussion On Ball Field By Council

The condition of the playing field at Memorial Park was reviewed again at the weekly session of the Albany City Council when a letter was read from M. Segerberg, president of the Albany Athletic Booster Club, asking if the Council could take immediate steps in smoothing the field for upcoming schedules of recreational activities.

The information was forthcoming that the Park and Recreation Dept. were going to hammer-knife the field, but Council conceded the repairs would be a temporary stop-gap and more permanent repairs would have to wait for a report from City Attorney Larry D. Sauer of a review of the agreement between City and Schools on playground maintenance, and (2) the funds available for the project.

Council members have visited the playing field and admit repair is in order.

Other business on the hour long Council session included:

Declaration of National Beauty Salon Week February 14 to 20 and a proclamation to be drawn. The proclamation was signed by Mayor Hubert F. Call and presented to President Arturo Azurdia and Vice President Margie McCoy of Affiliate 14, California Cosmology Assn. of Oakland. Both Mr. Azurdia and Miss McCoy have Albany beauty salons.

An application for permission to operate a three cab taxi service by Henry and Violet Brock, to be used during racing season at Golden Gate fields, was referred to Chief of Police Ralph Jensen for recommendation.

Etta Jordan Hill Paintings At El Cerrito Library

The paintings of Etta Jordan Hill are the featured display in the El Cerrito Library through-out the month of January. Mrs. Hill is a product of California schools, having studied at the University of Redlands, where she majored in English literature and physical education. School in Oakland and presently is employed as a teacher in charge of the student center at Lincoln Intermediate School in Berkeley.

Mrs. Hill became a student of Mr. Jack Richard at the El Cerrito Community Center in 1968, fulfilling a long-dormant desire to paint. The exhibit at the El Cerrito Library is her second one-woman show. Previous exhibits include the Spring Art Show at the El Cerrito Community Center in June of 1969 (where she won a $25 first place and an honorable mention), and other shows at the same place in the fall of '69 and the spring of '70; the Jack London Show of 1969; the Art-Mill-In at St. Paul's Methodist Church of Berkeley in October of '69; the Black Artist Festival at Pauley Ballroom, U.C., in February '70; the Black Odyssey Festival at the Church School of the Divinity, June, '70, Berkeley; a special one-woman show in October, '70, for the National Association of Negro Business and Professional Women at the Golden State Life Insurance Building, Oakland; the "Through Black Eyes" exhibit at the Unitarian Fellowship, Cedar and Bonita Streets, Berkeley.

The paintings will be on display through January at the El Cerrito branch of the Contra Costa County Library at 6510 Stockton Avenue. Library hours are Monday-Thursday from 10-9, Friday and Saturday from 10-6. Albany Library patrons will find that their local library cards will be honored at the El Cerrito Library.

MATH MADE EXCITING!

By Olga Bier
"I'm depressed today. Kiss me!" Could this be a machine talking?

This seemingly frivolous statement is most dramatically used in Room 205 at Albany High School. It illustrates to the student of computer science just how a properly programmed computer can supply answers that may be too complicated or lengthy to compute manually.

Computer on Loan

Something exciting is taking place on the second floor of Albany High. It is easy to see by the numbers of students and faculty using the Math Laboratory, Resource Center. A first of its kind in Albany, Room 205, known as the "Den," offers not only supplementary resources such as additional texts, books, games, individual tutoring, and a workshop atmosphere, it also features a teletype connected by telephone to a Data General Nova Computer at the Lawrence Hall of Science at UC, Berkeley.

Now, by means of this mobile teletype unit and data phone, students can set up their own programs and utilize the computerized solutions. Ease and familiarity with a basic machine such as this one on loan to Albany from the Lawrence Hall of Science, provide students of science and math and the future engineers of our community valuable preparation for required college computer studies.

Training Classes in Progress

In cooperation with Mr. David Stonerod of the Lawrence Hall of Science, Mr. Norman Smith, chairman of Albany High's Math Department, and Mrs. Marylee Saxton of the High Potential Program, instruction in basic computer language and techniques has been started for Albany students. In addition, seven elementary and two of the high school personnel are taking in-service training from Mr. Stonerod and hope to expand and take over the entire program next year.

Possibilities Unlimited

Also on loan at AHS is an experimental model Card Reader. Instead of only one student working at the teletype, an entire class can prepare individual programs on cards simultaneously. The possibilities of integrating with other departments such as science in the solving of multiple and more realistic problems present unlimited educational opportunity to Albany school children.

Think Method, Not Details

To the layman with no special interest in mathematics, just what does this mean? Only that our children, rather than being limited with the mechanics of arithmetic rote, can be taught to think in terms of methods of solution. Even when a student doesn't know the required computation for arriving at the answer, if he understands the method by which the answer is obtained, he can program the computer to supply the answers. Problems that would take four blackboards and three hours of calculating in astronomical figures can be solved in moments. The object is learning to think "HOW" and not "WHAT."

The "Den" a Huge Success

The opportunity for all the students at Albany to participate in an exciting activity is obviously why the Math "Den" in Room 205 has been such a success. In a new format of traveling teachers, the math department with Mr. Carl Couch, Principal of AHS, came up with this unique setup which enables Room 205 to be free all day as a resource workshop. With a faculty member on conference there each period, students gather when it opens at 7:15 until it closes sometime near 5 p.m. The noon crush is gratifying. Students often must be reminded that other classes are in session and must be attended after lunch!

Mr. Smith, department chairman, points out, "The Den offers the student the opportunity to work with equipment not available in regular classrooms, get individual help, and establish a basis for better teacher-student and student-student relationships. What better an environment for learning!"

An Impressive Beginning

Working with the $4,000 budget, allocated by Albany's Board of Education last September, this program has established an impressive foundation for future exploration. This year the funds went mainly for the rental of the teletype terminal at AHS, telephone hookup, maintenance and consultant services. Hopes are up for having—someday—two computers in the high school and one in each elementary school, offering the city's children a math program designed for tomorrow.

Next week Part Two will describe: Computer-Type Problem Solving in the Third Grade? You bet!

James Paintings On Display

Paintings by Eileeta James are on display at San Pablo branch of the Contra Costa County Library. There are selections done in acrylic with both palette knife and brushes.

Mrs. James is a busy housewife with two boys, Craig and Brian, but she makes time for her painting hobby which she started about a year and a half ago.

She studies under Kena Mitchell in Albany, and is now a member of the El Sobrante Art Guild. Her paintings are representational, many of them of flowers. This reflects her love of growing and arranging flowers which she has done for years. Mrs. James has had her paintings shown at the El Sobrante Library, at Port Costa, and at a Savings and Loan company in Hayward.

Mrs. James' paintings will be on display during the month of January at the San Pablo Library

Fire Plug

You are in a public building and someone screams fire! What would you do?

In a public building, a theater, store, at school, a hotel or at work it could happen to you. A scream or smell of smoke can create panic, a crushing rush for safety that can block your escape. Keep cool. Avoid the crowd, look for an alternate fire exit.

If smoke thickens, stay low, close to the floor. If lights go out, follow along the wall till you feel a doorway.

If your escape is blocked, close doors behind you to hold back the fire and lean out a window if possible and wait for rescue. Jumping from upper floors is a risky last resort.

Remember—check for fire exits when entering a building.—
